CROWDS OF CHILDREN ENJOY PLAYGROUNDS

FIVE HUNDRED ENTHUSIASTIC YOUNGSTERS IN QUEST OF RECREATION.

DIRECTORS KEPT BUSY

Start Throngs of Boys and Girls in Course of Sports and Games Planned for Summer Days.

Five hundred happy boys and girls looking forward to a whole summer full of healthy romps and fascinating games, flocked to the playgrounds at the Washington, Jefferson and Webster schools on Tuesday morning, anxious to be on hand for the opening day in order to make the most of the fun. There were even more youngsters on hand this morning, and the directors are having a busy time of it getting their summer course of sports and recreation activities.

Head Director Walter Cox wore a smile today and expressed his surprise and pleasure at the interest which is being shown by the Janesville children in the playgrounds. He is confident that every boy and girl in the city, especially the younger ones, will be attracted and benefited by the daily programs of exercises and games before the summer is over. He has plenty of ideas in reserve and these will be sufficient to keep up the interest throughout the season.

The Washington school ranked first in attendance yesterday, over one hundred and ninety being the total number enrolled during the day. At five o'clock yesterday afternoon 125 youngsters were playing in the sand, enjoying games of volley and basketball, and using the swings, teeter-totters and ladders at the first ward grounds. Edward Atwood, a graduate from the Janesville high school last month, and a prominent basketball man, is assisting in the work at this location. He will assume full charge at the first ward grounds during the summer, under Director Cox's supervision. Yesterday Ray Eder, secretary for the Adams grounds, was waiting for the latter plot to be finally completed, aided Atwood in marking out the various courts and baseball diamond.

The Webster site, situated on the Webster school grounds, in the Fourth ward, is in charge of Victor Hemming, also a high school graduate of last month, and a prominent basketball leader in Badgerdom. He reported that for one hundred and seventy-five children reported for play at this point park during the day. Because of the lack of sufficient room to accommodate such large numbers, Hemming is having considerable difficulty in keeping the youngsters from bunching together. Facilities for enjoying a good time are the same as at the other grounds, the small ground space being the only drawback. The Webster location yesterday morning was the smallest number reported for the opening day. A great interest is being taken by these children, however, and more were expected today.

The Adams school grounds are being rushed to completion. Gravel has been placed and crushed, and the framework for apparatus will be erected at once, in hopes of opening the fourth recreation spot by next Monday. Raymond Eder, a Beloit College student and star athlete, will take charge of the work at this site. Walter Cox and his quartet of assistants are working for the best interests of the city, and are laboring under a systematic method, which is certain of bringing good results.

The directors were extremely busy yesterday teaching the youths the various games and how to play them. The Washington grounds has a public drinking fountain installed. Many other improvements and the introduction of new games will be a part of the work of the men in charge.

Big dance July 3rd, Assembly hall, Janesville. Come on in.

WEDDED TUESDAY AT ST. MARY'S CHURCH

Miss Emily Bier of Harmony is United in Marriage to Joseph Gassert of Milwaukee.

At eight o'clock Tuesday morning at the St. Mary's church, a very pretty wedding took place, which united in marriage Miss Emily Bier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Val Bier, of the town of Harmony, to Joseph G. Gassert of Milwaukee.

The bride's gown was of white charmeuse and shadow overice, and she carried a bouquet of white roses and sweet peas. She wore a beautiful bridal veil. The bridesmaid, Miss Clara Kilbert, wore a dress of Nile green crepe de chine, and carried a bouquet of white roses. Edward Bier, brother of the bride, and James Gassert, brother of the groom, acted as best men. The two flower girls, Edna Conners and Marie Hanauka, led the procession to the altar, both being dressed daintily in white, carrying baskets of pink roses. Rev. C. J. Bier of Neosho, Wisconsin, brother of the bride, celebrated high mass. A male choir rendered several selections; Prof. W. T. Thiele presided at the organ. A reception at the bride's home followed the ceremony.

The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Gassert and two sons, James and George; Miss Clara and Frances Kilbert and Mr. Snyder, all of Milwaukee; Miss Mayme Zarske, Hudson, Wisconsin; and Mr. and Mrs. H. Tridde, Beloit.

Mr. and Mrs. Gassert left last evening on a trip to northern Wisconsin, and expect to return to their home in Milwaukee before August first.

GIRL ESCAPES FROM BROTHER'S CUSTODY

Young Woman Committed to Insane Institution Escapes From Private Boarding Hotel.

Search is being made in this city and nearby towns for Miss Lena Dwall, age twenty-one years, who escaped this morning from the custody of her brother who had brought her to the state hospital at Chippewa Falls.

Arrangements had been made with Sheriff Whipple, who was to have taken the girl on the early morning train to the northern Wisconsin city. Instead of taking the girl who is mentally deranged, to the county jail in the women's ward, her brother left her at the private boarding house of Mrs. McDonald on North Academy street. This morning the girl was missing from her room and no trace of her has been found by the authorities.

TWO PLEAD NOT GUILTY TO CHARGES OF ASSAULT

Ernest Schumacher and Mrs. Bessie Coon, through their attorney, E. J. Peterson, plead not guilty to assault charges made by Alice Foss in the municipal court this morning. The case was set for July 8th.

ATTENDED MASS AT STOUGHTON TUESDAY

Many Janesville Catholics attended the first high mass held at the St. Ann's Catholic church in Stoughton yesterday morning, at which time Rev. John Scullion was celebrant of the mass. Rev. Scullion was ordained at Winona, Minnesota on June 23rd.

The occasion drew many people, both Catholics and Protestants from neighboring cities, the edifice being taxed to its capacity.

With Rev. Scullion, the celebrant of the mass, officiated Rev. E. J. McCarthy, of Waupun, a former pastor of St. Ann's, as assistant priest. Rev. James O'Donovan, of Winona, Minn., as deacon. Rev. James Glendon, also of Winona, as sub-deacon, and Rev. Michael McCarthy, as master of ceremonies.

Dr. David O'Hearn, of Milwaukee, preached the sermon, and attending in the sanctuary were Rev. William Mahoney of Janesville, Rev. James McGinnity, of Milton Junction, and Rev. Edward Levery, of Belle Plaine, Iowa. In the congregation were many members of the Catholic parishes of Janesville, Milton Junction, Edgerton and Madison. That the occasion was one of great solemnity to the young priest as well as to his aged father, Hugh Scullion, and his other relatives and many friends, scarcely need be said.

Following the church services, an elaborate banquet and reception was held at the R. P. dining hall. The ladies of the St. Ann's congregation acted as caterers. The newly ordained priest was then presented with a well filled purse, as a token of appreciation.

Those from this city attending were, Father Mahoney, Mr. and Mrs. James Fullerton, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence McKewan and family, Mrs. James Kelly and family, Mrs. Joseph Roach and family, Mrs. Mary Hemming, Mrs. Lawrence Cronin, Mrs. Thomas Spohn, and Mrs. John Peckman. Mrs. Mary Kirby of Chicago, accompanied the Janesville party.

HIGH SCHOOL CLASS REUNION AT YOST'S

Class of '89 Enjoyed Reunion at Yost Park Yesterday Afternoon.

Members of the class of '89 of the Janesville high school and their families, a party of thirty, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their graduation at a picnic dinner at Yost's park yesterday. An enjoyable present, was reported by everyone present. After dinner several speeches were made and letters were read from a number of the absent members.

The class feels honored by having as one of its members, J. Glenn Wray, whose name is to be found in the Hall of Fame. He himself was so modest that Judge E. Ray Stevens was called upon to tell the class of his fame.

Miss Caroline Zelinger was a guest of honor as she was one of the teachers of the class during their four years of high school life.

The members of the class who were present were: Mrs. Charles Heeder, Mrs. James Waddell, Mrs. Frank Gibbons, Mrs. Harry Garbutt, Miss Kittie McCulloch and H. E. Ranous, all of this city. Those from out of town were: Hon. E. Ray Stevens, circuit judge of Dane county, and Miss Alice Thornton of Boston, Mass.

Before returning home a boat ride was enjoyed up the river and several group pictures of the class were taken.

CITY ATTORNEY CONFERS WITH ATTORNEY GENERAL

City Attorney W. H. Dougherty and Attorney General Owens conferred this afternoon at Madison to prepare an answer to the bondholders' complaint to prevent the purchase of the Janesville water works by the city. This morning Attorney Dougherty received word from the Attorney General that the state officials would cooperate with the city in fighting the suit. Attorney Owens expressed the opinion that the issue at stake in the Racine case was practically the same as that involved in the Janesville case.

SULPHUR FOR ECZEMA

APPLIED LIKE COLD CREAM IT STOPS ITCHING AND DRIES SKIN ERUPTIONS RIGHT UP

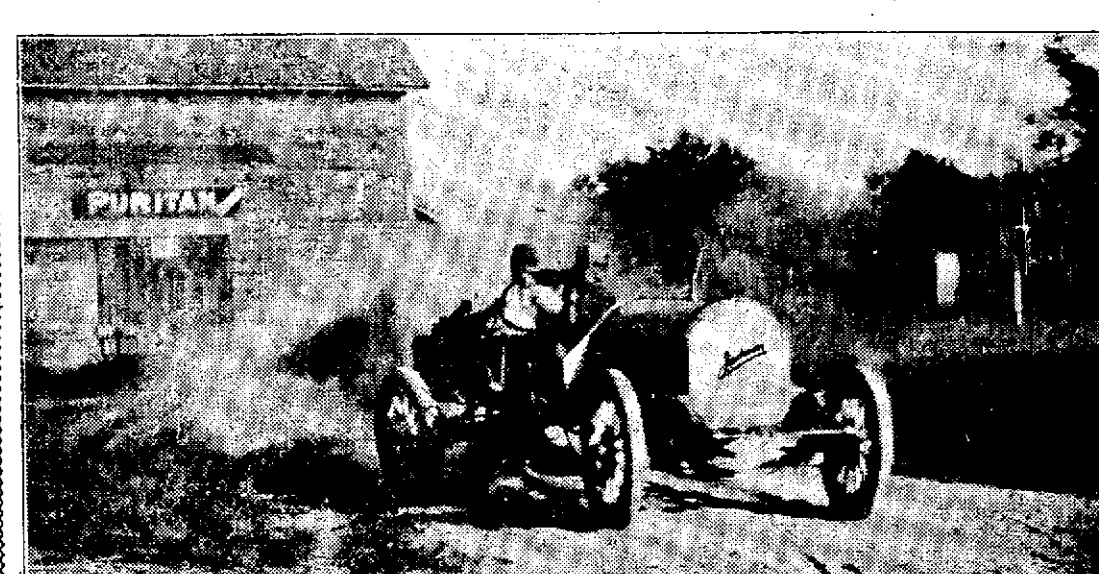

With the first application of bold-sulphur cream the angry itching attending any eczema eruption ceases and its remarkable healing powers begin. Sulphur, says a renowned dermatologist, just common bold-sulphur, made into a thick cream will soothe and heal the skin when irritated and broken out with Eczema or any form of eruption. The moment it is applied all itching ceases and after two or three applications the Eczema disappears, leaving the skin clear and smooth.

He tells Eczema sufferers to get from any good pharmacy an ounce of bold-sulphur cream and apply it to

THE APOLLO.

How does she do it? That is a question everyone who has seen Madame Ellis exhibit her powers of telepathy at the Apollo, is asking. Several suggestions have been submitted but none will stand the test. How she does it is a puzzle. Trickery would be impossible. If one thinks these people who offer articles have been "planted" before, that one needs but give a test, and hundreds are doing it each evening. And as for a code, she could not possibly remember so many things. The act is a puzzler.

Madame Ellis completes her engagement at the Apollo tonight. Leaving out all question of whether she can or can not do such things, it is interesting to watch her do it.

ADJOURN GIRL'S CASE AFTER A COURT TRIAL

Maud Lawrence, age thirteen years, was arraigned before Judge Maxfield in the first juvenile case on record under the juvenile branch of the court this morning. District Attorney S. G. Dunwiddie charges that the girl is delinquent, the complaint having been made following the apprehension of the Lawrence girl at the Jackson street switch tower in the company of two men.

After testimony had been taken Judge Maxfield adjourned the case for one week, during which time the Lawrence girl will be required to report to the municipal court daily.

THE LABOR-SAVING ALL GAS LAUNDRY

Wash-day can no longer be referred to as "blue" Monday, for the use of Gas as fuel has changed the once dreaded and often postponed task to one of every-day, pleasurable routine. The housewife now has the time-saving Gas Iron—the convenient Gas Laundry Stove—the ever-ready Ruud Automatic Gas Water Heater with its pure, abundant supply. With a RUUD connected to your house pipes, you get unlimited hot water with no more attention than you give your cold water supply—a simple turn of the faucet. And it's scalding hot, and there's plenty for the laundry and every other part of the house at the same time.

The RUUD is self-operating and burns gas only while you are drawing hot water, and automatically shuts off the gas the moment the faucet is closed.

The best understanding of the time and money-saving qualities of these appliances is to see them demonstrated in operation at our showrooms.

Today's Edgerton News

LARGE CROWD YESTERDAY AT KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS PICNIC

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Edgerton, Wis., July 1.—The local lodge, Knights of Pythias, held a picnic Tuesday, June 30th, at Charley Hunt, the pleasant event being enjoyed by a large crowd, including members, their families and friends. After a bounteous basket lunch, the Edgerton concert band rendered music to enliven the spirit of the occasion, after which the many scheduled events took place. The ball game was called promptly at two o'clock, and the evenly matched teams battled twelve innings, when Pyre's batting rally started a series of events that resulted in the winning run. Pyre, for the Mills, was Pyre and Schoenfeld, for the Corn Red, Whitteit and Conrad. Each pitcher handled himself with great ability, and each man had fourteen strike-outs to his credit. Home runs by Stewart and Whitteit. The spectacular fielding of Editor Gile, and Hopkins, and the sensational work of Farman at the initial sack featured the game.

Mrs. R. C. Wogen of Beloit has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. James Whitteit, for the past few days.

Mrs. J. S. Miller and daughter, Jane, who have been guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Pomeroy, for the past few days, returned to her home in Madison yesterday.

Of course not, sed Mr. Wilkins, she throws bred crumbs, but Winfield didnt have any bred crumbs so he had to raskil, leat ther the best things he cook, get his hands awn, which happened to be the leaves of yure book.

Wats that, my book, sed pop, you dont meen that volume of short stories I lent you last week.

Yes, thats the wun, sed Mr. Wilkins, thats wat I startid to tell you, I cawt him, tho, befor he had torn moar than wun or 2 stories out of it, and the littil villin tear out the very stories I hadent red, I wat do you no about that, feeding the birds, dont that take the cake, feeding the birds, ha ha ha. And he startid to weel Winfield agen, and pop kepp staring at him with wun hand up to his hed, saying, Ware ignerents is bliss tis a waist of time to nock him down and jump awn him.

Reach Down in that Old Bottom Drawer

and get out a fresh pipeful of STANDARD. Man, that's tobacco satisfaction for you. Just like old times, ain't it—when you used to work on the outside, before you took the inside job. And the old STANDARD habit is a mighty good habit, too.

A naturally sweet, rich, fragrant smoke of pure Kentucky tobacco, carefully aged for three to five years to bring out all the mellowness and smoothness—that's

STANDARD Long Cut Tobacco

STANDARD is a natural, honest tobacco for men who like their smoking to have a solid satisfaction to it. You get tobacco-hungry lots of times, and no insipid "hash" will come anywhere near suiting you.

You must have your STANDARD. It's as satisfying as a square meal. Been on the market for 50 years and still is the old standby of the he-boys with vigor and vim in them.

A week's trial will prove that STANDARD can keep right on satisfying you, day after day. Then you will keep right on using STANDARD.

NEW POLITICAL CREED.

Theodore Roosevelt has broken his silence by making his first public address since his return from Europe and that despite the orders of his physicians. It is a strong talk. While it was delivered at Pittsburgh in the interests of his friend, Pinchot, who is a candidate for the job of United States senator from Pennsylvania, still it touches on national affairs in such a way that it is really significant. Our strenuous ex-president adopts a new political creed which may be briefly summarized in the following paragraphs. It is well worth considering and will meet the approval of men the country over who are fearful at what may result from the tariff-tinkering and the attacks on big business interests by the democratic administration. Colonel Roosevelt says:

"First, we cannot and do not want to destroy all corporations. We must have large units to do our work."

"Second, we cannot make every man compete with every other man; we cannot go back to 1850. Still less to 1650."

"Third, we cannot destroy monopoly by attacking all forms of concentration, whether monopolistic or not."

"Fourth, we cannot destroy real monopoly by attacking its legal form. We must find out and take away the real economic basis of monopoly, which is a very different thing."

"Fifth, we can get no effective results through the courts, with their slow and restricted procedure."

"Sixth, we must encourage honest business and allow that business concentration which will give the power necessary to serve us. This policy of the encouragement of decent business is as important to the welfare of our people as in our other policy of effective warfare against corrupt and unfair business."

"Seventh, there must be co-operation among business men, among wage workers and among farmers."

CONDITIONS NOT THEORY.

Business interests the country over are pessimistic over what may be the final outcome of the agitation against the big business interests by the democratic leaders. The failure of the Chaffin company in New York on the very day of Wilson's pronouncement of an era of prosperity causes the Wall Street Journal to say: "Such incidents as the biggest mercantile bankruptcy of recent times should shake Washington out of its day dream, that existing business depression is purely a product of 'psychology.' The gentleman at the head of the enterprise which has just been put into the hands of receivers has been for many years an independent democrat and tariff reformer, and is the last man in the world to have added a 'psychological depression,' if the steady economic stream of distribution through the banks had been flowing smoothly through its regular channels. It is to be regretted that the inter-mate inter-relations of production and credit do not seem to be thoroughly understood in Washington. If goods from the mills remain unsold on the shelves of jobbers and retailers, collections inevitably become slow, merchants are unable to meet their liabilities at the banks, and the banks are forced by the reserve laws to curtail accommodations and husband their cash until they are black in the face about the refusal of the public to buy goods being only a psychological phenomenon, but the hard fact none the less confronts the merchant that he has goods on his hands and lacks the money to pay for them.

"Credit is a delicate mechanism, which depends for its security upon the orderly functioning of the economic machinery. Such functioning depends upon confidence, and it is only when confidence prevails that goods are bought and money is paid for them. Anything which affects confidence and impairs credit has its ramifications throughout the whole social organism."

"In the case of the big enterprise which has just gone into the hands of a receiver, the tariff was no such direct factor as it might be in the case of the failure of a domestic woolen or cotton mill."

"Department stores buy their goods in the domestic or foreign market, wherever they find them cheapest. But if distrust and business paralysis spread over the country, whether the causes are 'psychological' or financial, consumers and retailers restrict their operations and the effect is felt through all the channels of trade, whether the particular trade feeds upon products which are domestic or foreign."

"The real difficulty of our present situation, therefore, lies deeper than specific tariff changes, although it may be intensified by tariff doubts and fears. The administration at Washington has undertaken to carry out two important policies—the reduction of the tariff and the restoration of order to the banking system. It would seem to be a part of wisdom to give the business community time to digest these two changes before adding other articles to the menu which seem likely, if crowded upon the other changes, to bring about acute indigestion."

"Revulsion of feeling throughout the country against further legislative meddling with business is gaining volume every day. Good politicians are likely to advise the president that he can only preserve what he has secured, and have it given a fair trial, by ceasing to torment the patient by additional dosing."

THE MEXICAN CRISIS.

With dispatches telling us of trouble between Carranza and Villa, with the rebel leader in the south refusing to recognize Carranza or his faction, Huerta again reported ready to flee the country and his army deserting by the thousands the suggestion by Sir Lionel Carden, British ambassador, that in view of existing anti-presidential conditions, women and children had better leave the City of Mexico, is an indication that the fall of the Huerta government at last is momentarily expected, and that it may be accompanied with a crash in which people will get hurt no one pretends to deny.

The statement that at the battle of Zacatecas five thousand federal soldiers deserted their own flag and joined the forces of Villa must be disheartening to the old fellow along. But the experiences of Villa are not all of a character likely to provoke gloom. How does he like the policy attributed to Carranza of keeping him out of ammunition by withholding supplies? This must be exasperating to a man usually accustomed to have his own way, and to take a thing when he wants it, as he did in his old encounters on the highway.

Well, nobody knows much about the Mexican situation, or can know much, while the news continues conflicting.

RATE MAKING POWER.

Whatever the practical effect of the long and short haul decision of the supreme court, it can hardly have been unexpected by the railway companies. They lose the immediate advantage of the comparatively high intermountain short-haul rate, but the general principles laid down should not occasion dissatisfaction among the carriers.

No substantial advantage is taken from the companies. Between the right to fix rates and the right to review existing rates the difference is not of first rate importance. Heretofore the companies have made their own special rates to points affected by water competition, thereby putting at a disadvantage inland communities which, though nearer shipping centers, have to pay a higher freight rate. The supreme court says nothing against the practice. On the contrary, it sustains the constitutional rate from the company to the Interstate Commerce Commission, before which the company can lay its case as in the pending proceeding for an advance in eastern rates.

The particular matters decided are less important than the general reaffirmance of the authority of the commission.

This is the day and age of strenuous happenings. Europe is on the verge of a political upheaval, Turkey still hopes to regain its territory lost in the Balkan war, Greece is ready to fly at the throats of the Musselmans, Bryan continues his chautauqua addresses, and Wilson's talk of prosperity is heard. Roosevelt bursts forth into speech and Huerta is again ready to flee from Mexico.

They now whisper that Congressman Cooper has the senatorial bee in his bonnet and that on his visit to Janesville on Saturday next he may make a formal declaration of his intention of entering the race.

The Fourth will be here shortly, and with fair weather Janesville will entertain one of the largest gatherings that have ever come to witness one of the Bower City's famous celebrations.

City Assessor Smith is most anxious to know if anyone in Janesville owns an aeroplane so he can place a valuation on it. Step right up and speak out if you do.

It is intimated that there may be another candidate for the republican nomination for United States Senator in the field before long in the republican ranks. The more the merrier.

Beloit citizens greeted the Janesville boosters last evening with a spirit of welcome that those who took part in the trip will not soon forget.

Banner crops will do a lot to stave off a panic but this can not be placed to the democratic party by any means.

What an awful dry spell we are having. No rain for twenty four hours at least. Rap on wood quickly through.

One can explain the rainy season when it is understood that this is the time of year for Sunday school picnics.

STATE PRESS COMMENT ON POLITICAL SITUATION

Progressive Retrenchment.

The platform of A. H. Dahl of Westby, candidate for the republican nomination for governor, is a quasi-economic platform. Some things he would keep up as before. Others he would cut off. We are interested especially in his plans for retrenchment. Here is where he would save money.

Abolish the state bill factory.

Then Charles A. McCarthy is the state bill factory. He was formerly appointed to put into shape bills that members of the legislature wanted, and to furnish information on legislation. In this direction the state reference library, as Dr. McCarthy calls himself, has a legitimate use, but, as Mr. Dahl points out, Mr. McCarthy deviated his business far beyond the function for which it was created. It has become a leader and inspiration for the legislature. Some people say it is the real legislature.

Then there is the state board of public affairs. What it is for nobody knows. It doesn't do anything of value to the state, so far as we have been able to find out. Yet Mr. Dahl says it spent $40,000 last year. We did not know the sum was so large. The board supervises nothing. It merely suggests things just as any other person might do without making so much expense. We are not aware that any of its suggestions show extraordinary foresight. Mr. Dahl may have a special reason for wishing to abolish it. The chairman of the board is William H. Hatton of New London, one of his opponents for the nomination for governor. Mr. Dahl, in fact, proposes like everybody else, merely to reform the other fellow. He has no enthusiasm for reductions of expenses in departments controlled by his friends. But perhaps that would be too much to expect. He will leave it to Mr. Hatton to outline ways by which money may be saved by curbing extravagance in the Dahl crowd. Mr. Dahl has done his part in showing up the Hatton party—La Crosse Leader Press.

The Call Needs a "Calling." As far as principle is concerned the fight is the same as ever, big business, power, prestige and privilege against representative government and the people's welfare, but with the difference that the issue instead of being clear cut as of old has been befogged in a hundred ways and facts distorted until the average man has little conception of the exact conditions.—Racine Call.

The above spoken concerning the recent Madison convention and the platform it adopted, reveals the Call as a particularly foolish "progressive" newspaper. "Big business, power, prestige and privilege, against representative government and the people's welfare," indeed! Why call it then that it "progressive" government means "representative government and the people's welfare" the whole state with very little regard for party should be up in arms against the legislative "bill factory," and be so deadly anxious to get in a killing swipe at the political rascals that have so long been exercising the power, prestige and privilege," to draw several salaries apiece from the state treasury and to put more and more of their friends on the pay roll to do the same?—Appleton Post.

The issue. The issue before the voters of Wisconsin, to be decided at the primary election to be held in September is clearly drawn.

On the one hand, Messrs. Hatton, Dahl and Hull, candidates for governor, stand for a repetition of the maladministration of state government which has become such a curse upon the people during the past ten years; on the other hand, Mr. Philipp stands for a safe and sane government, reduced taxes, the abolishment of useless commissions, economy and the segregation of the university from politics.—Wausau Record-Herald.

BOSTON BEAUTY SPECIALIST TO VISIT JANESVILLE

The Smith Drug Co. Look Forward to Large Crowds During Her Week's Stay at The Rexall Store

Will Give Number of Free Facial Massages and Personal Advice in Your Home by Appointment.

An opportunity which is sure to prove as beneficial as it is rare will be afforded the women of Janesville and vicinity when Mrs. Edith Hamilton, the much talked of Beauty Specialist, now touring Illinois as representative of the United Drug Company of Boston,—creators of the many Harmony Beauty Requisites and equally well-known, "facial" preparations, starts her public demonstrations for the week commencing Monday, July 6th, as the guest of The Smith Drug Co., proprietors of the Rexall Store and sole distributor of the Harmony Toilet Products in Janesville.

Mrs. Hamilton contends that it is the privilege of every woman to take advantage of anything that will tend to lend a touch of added beauty to the skin, but, says Mrs. Hamilton, "extreme care should be exercised to choose only such preparations that really do help nature in the beautifying of your complexion."

"Of course no one will question the assertion that the woman with the clean, well-preserved skin is a much admired person anywhere," and she continues, "If the woman of today would only take the care to treat the skin to the benefits of a good massage that she takes in reading the household section of the paper, we would see fewer wrinkles, and more, yes, a great many more women young at fifty."

We have no doubt about Mrs. Hamilton's ability to offer the women of Janesville some very valuable advice, and The Smith Drug Co. will, we feel sure, have a store full of the "fairer sex" during Mrs. Hamilton's stay at The Rexall Store.

Mr. Smith of the Smith Drug Co., says that he has a real beauty treat in store for the women of Janesville, so you'd better get ready for Mrs. Hamilton's arrival, ladies.

AMERICAN OARSMEN READY FOR REGATTA

British King and Queen Attend Water Carnival at Henley on 'Aspol' scowls.

Henley-on-Thomas, England, July 1.—Henley Regatta, England's greatest water carnival, opened today in a blaze of glory, in the presence of King George, Queen Mary and the elite of British and European aristocracy and sporting society. Thousands of craft, ranging from magnificent houseboats to punts and outriggers, lined up by the banks, as King George and Queen Mary and the leading members of the Court were rowed over the course in the famous state barge, propelled by twelve of the royal watermen, gorgeously in scarlet and gold. In view of recent suffragette activities extraordinary precautions were taken by the land and river police, to prevent interference with the program, and the boats of the various competitors will be under strong guard during the four days racing.

This year's entries created a record for foreign competitors, and for the first time since 1902 the United States was represented by two eights and three single scullers. The American eights, which are competing for the Grand Challenge Cup which practically carries with it the championship of the world for this class of event, are Harvard University and the Union Boat Club of Boston, Mass. Other foreign entries for the "Grand" are Winnipeg Rowing Club, Winnipeg, Canada, and the Mainz Ruder Verein, of Mayence, Germany. The Royal Club Nautique of Ghent, Belgium has entered an eight for the Thames Challenge Cup.

For the Steward's Cup, (fours) the Mainz Ruder Verein, of Mayence, Germany and the Grasshopper Club, of Zurich, Switzerland, compete while in the Diamond Sculls, virtually the world's amateur championship for single scullers, America is represented by James B. Ayer, William Tudor, and Paul W. Wainwright, Boston, all of the Union Boat Club, Boston, Mass., Canada by Robert Dibble, Don Rowing Club, Toronto, (Canada); and Italy by Giuseppe Sinigaglia, Lario Club, Como.

So seriously has this foreign invasion been taken by British rowing men that the Leander Club, England's leading aquatic organization, has strained every nerve to put the best possible eight in the competition for the grand Challenge. There will be the usual strong College eights from Oxford and Cambridge, but when Leander puts itself to the trouble it always manages to get a real England eight. Leander always gets into the final and the crew which will do duty this year is—D. L. Daly, S. E. Swan, C. E. V. Ruxton, E. D. Horsall, C. S. Clark, A. P. R. Wiggins, P. F. Scruton and H. G. Bourne.

The best of the British champions for the "Diamonds" are: A. M. Cutloch, E. G. Williams, S. E. Swan, E. D. Pinks and E. L. Watts. The finals will be rowed Friday and Saturday. Only twice have American oarsmen carried away the Henley trophies, in 1872 when Columbia University won the Visitors' Cup (fours) and in 1897, when E. H. Ten Eyck, Wachusett, Mass., won the Diamonds.

Wilbur Robinson, Brooklyn manager, had a little dispute over a base-running matter with Lawson Robertson, trainer of the Irish-American A. C. in New York city. Robertson the trainer, was telling Robinson, the manager, that if he took a job with him as club trainer he would increase the base-running speed of every man on the team. And at that point Robinson asked Robertson whether a play—er rounding first on the high gear or left foot. Robertson said he should touch with the left foot and pivot on the right. Robinson disagreed with him to second. Robinson disagreed with him to second. Robinson here and in fact refused.

him the job for that reason alone. Robinson (the manager) thought, and most all the newspaper men present thought, that the player should use the right foot. Since that time, however, Ty Cobb and Eddie Collins have come forth to say that they turn on the left foot and that any player who wants to get the best speed does the same. And Robinson is now more willing to listen to Robertson.

Silk O'Loughlin says the worst injury he ever received while umpiring—not pop bottles, but in the course of the game—was at Philadelphia several years ago when he was working behind the bat and Walter Johnson was pitching. "The batter clipped a foul tip that caught me right on the arm," says Silk, "and I thought my arm had gone on with the ball to the stand. For at least ten minutes it was paralyzed and for several months after I could feel the present thought, that the player bad enough, but when a foul tip is added to it you may know that the ball was going at an awful gait."

James E. Sullivan tried very hard to get baseball entered among the events at the Olympic games. In order that a sport he on the cards it must be played by at least six different countries. Sullivan tried very hard indeed to show that six countries were playing baseball, but he wasn't able to get very far with it. He mentioned England as one of them and the athletic congress at Paris gave Mr. Sullivan the hearty and unkind ha-ha.

DISTRESS TO NATION
ROOSEVELT CHARGES

sets of politicians, neither of them responsive to the public needs.
To meet such a situation, Col. Roosevelt argued that the voters of Pennsylvania should repudiate Penrose and his nominees and followers and further should oppose the supporters of the present administration. Concluding his indictment of the "bosses," he outlined what he styled the "specific performances" of the progressive party in the matter of state and national legislation, and again took up the tariff question.
"We progressives advocate the immediate creation of a non-partisan commission," he said, "with power to propose revision of the tariff rates by schedule, treating each case on an intelligent consideration of its merits, divorced from favoritism and the fostering of special interests. The program would not be attended by the reckless haste, the improper influences, the sectional party politics which characterize our present methods of tariff legislation by general law; and remember that exactly the same methods were pursued in making the present tariff law, as in making the Payne-Adrian law which it superseded. Our proposed methods would disorganize business by a complete change in all the tariff schedules at one time. This is the progressive tariff program, and I ask you to weigh it side by side with the tariff record of Senator Penrose; a tariff record as productive of evil as the tariff record of any of the men he opposes.
Anti-Trust Program.
Of the progressive anti-trust program, he said: "We believe in cooperation among the business men, among farmers and among wage workers. It is evident that the problem of all anti-trust legislation is effectively to determine on the one hand what trade practices are unfair, and on the other to prevent the exclusive control of any factor essential to production by any person or corporation or group operated as a unit. It is primarily an administrative problem. To meet it, we must have adequate administrative machinery.
The progressives therefore advocate the creation of a strong interstate trade commission and would give such commission, primarily, three powers: "First, the power of investigation. The commission should be able to ascertain on complaint or on its own motion whether a monopoly in fact exists and if it does exist, the basis of its monopolistic power.
"Second, the power directly to prohibit all unfair trade practices within its jurisdiction. This power would enable the commission to stop all monopolies based on unfair and oppressive trade practices. Whatever monopoly has bases on such practices, what is needed is not the right to recommend that suits be brought by an attorney general, or by any one else. What is needed is the direct power in the commission itself to stop the wrong.
"Third, the power to end the exclusive control of a factor necessary to production by an order adapted to the circumstances of the particular case. The order may involve changes in organization, in management or in the conduct of the business. Where exclusive possession of a natural resource is the basis of the monopoly, it may be necessary to subject its possession to the obligation of public service, that is, the obligation to sell to others a reasonable amount at reasonable rates.

"Our constructive program of anti-trust legislation has no quarrel with large business organizations as such. On the contrary, we recognize that business efficiency in production can be obtained only through business organization. But we demand that the government be clothed with all the necessary power to crush monopoly with its attendant evils.
"Contrasted with this program we have the democratic anti-trust program now under discussion in the senate of the United States. That program proves the inadequacy of the democratic party for the present and the future of the nation. It is, and always will be, the state's rights party, the party opposed to strong federal action, the party afraid of power.
"We cannot control our great national business without power, national power. But the democrats dare not use power themselves, nor let any one else have it. Their trust program, as it stands today, is made futile by this fear. Their official administration bills propose a weak federal trade commission, with no power except to investigate and report. They fear to give the government the strength to cope with corporate abuses. They fear to give the commission power to prevent unfair trade practices. Indeed, their measure would hardly give the commission power really to investigate, much less to destroy by proper administrative order, monopolies based on the exclusive possession of a factor essential to production. To the powers of investigation and recommendation which the bill proposes to give to the commission, so far as they go, we have no objection. It is the inadequacy of the commission's power to destroy monopoly which we condemn. Progressive congressmen voted for the bill, not because it represents an adequate attempt to deal with a great problem, but in the hope that a day will arrive when the so-called trade commission will be given sufficient power to make it a real trade commission, such as our national platform promises as part of such bills as we have introduced would provide.
"The house of representatives has also passed a bill supplemental to the Sherman anti-trust act. Many of the provisions of the bill deserve commendation, especially those which prohibit certain forms of unfair trade competition which the courts have not as yet clearly condemned, but which upright business men everywhere recognize as wrong and tending to monopoly. Similar provisions will be found in the progressive anti-trust bills.
"But the Clayton bill goes hopelessly wrong in that it forbids specifically any combination or agreement in interstate commerce, between any two or more corporations, firms or even individuals, which in any way lessens or restricts the competition between them. This is the hub of their whole proposition. They propose that two farmers selling milk across a state line cannot co-operate; and that two men doing any business across a state line cannot form a partnership or a corporation. They insist that there must be no big business power, concentrated power, or large enterprise anywhere, and that our business must go back to the period of not merely 1850, but 1850; to the cobbler's bench, the grist mill and the blacksmith forge.
"This is economic absurdity. * * * Unlimited competition has proved one of the greatest curses of modern civilization. It was unlimited competition which created the great trusts, exactly as it created the sweatshop and is chiefly responsible for child labor. The new freedom is merely the permits each man to cut his neighbor's throat.
"The progressive plan, on the other hand," said Col. Roosevelt, "will allow business concentration in so far as such concentration gives social and economic efficiency and good service. But it will also give the government full power to see that business concentration does serve these necessary ends, and that it is not used for unfair competition or for monopoly or for the unfair treatment of labor or for any other anti-social end.
"This is the only tenable position on the trust problem, for it faces the facts and does not try to turn back the hands of the clock. By long and disappointing experience, we have had several cardinal facts hammered into us.
"First, we cannot, and do not want to destroy all corporations; we must have large units to do our work.
"Second, we cannot make every man compete with every other man; we cannot go back to 1850, still less to 1850.
"Third, we cannot destroy monopoly by attacking all forms of concentration, whether monopolistic or not.
"Fourth, we cannot destroy real monopoly by attacking its legal form. We must find out and take away the real economic basis of monopoly, which is a very different thing.
"Fifth, we can get no effective results through the courts, with their slow and restricted procedure.
"Sixth, we must encourage honest business and allow that business concentration which will give the power necessary to serve us. This policy of the encouragement of decent business is as important to the welfare of the people, as is our other policy of effective warfare against corrupt and unfair business.
"Seventh, there must be co-operation among business men, among wage workers, and among farmers.
"We have had now twenty-four years of experience with trying to regulate business by destruction, the colonial method. The result has been nearly flat failure. The administration proposes a policy of further destruction, even more unintelligent in conception and certain to be more futile in performance, than the existing policy which it amends.
"The only alternative is the progressive plan. * * * From all of this it follows that we have a right to ask good citizens to join against the present administration. The policies of the administration should be rebuked by the people and senators and congressmen returned to Washington who will strive to end these policies."

WOMAN'S PAGE

Heart and Home Problems

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Can your parents keep you at home when you are of age? I'm a girl of eighteen and I cannot get along with my mother or my brothers. Please advise me what to do.

(2) I never cared for men. I met one about a month ago, a few years older than I am, that I would like to go with. But my friend won't let me go anywhere near him. He is a nice man. Could you please tell me how I could get to go with him?

(3) I don't care to go to parties or dances and my friends don't like to go with me because I don't like to go with boys they go with. Could you please give me a little advice.

(4) You are not legally of age to make contracts for yourself, except to marry, until you are twenty-one years old. If your parents support you properly, they can legally compel you to stay with them. However, perhaps it would be a great help to your parents if you would get some work outside of home to support yourself. You would then be away from home most of the time and there would not be so much chance for disagreements. You will not mind things as lovely as you imagine away from home. A girl alone has a little advice.

(5) If the young man cares anything for you he will manage to get better acquainted with you. Ask him casually to come up to your house some evening and if he does make it so more of you. He will want to see more of you. He will come, don't ask him, but be pleasant when you do see him.

(6) I am glad you will not go with any but respectable boys, my dear, and that you prefer to go with none rather than take up the wrong kind.

Household Hint

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

Cheese should never be kept in the ice chest as its strong odor permeates the other articles of food. Keep it in a closed dish on the sideboard, wrapped in a damp napkin; otherwise it becomes dry and oily.

Line a two-quart mason jar with lady fingers, crusts, stale bread, with alternate layers of the cream and fruit. Cover, pack in salt and ice and let stand two hours. Branded peaches cut in pieces, with some of their syrup added, greatly improves the pudding.

Pineapple Pudding—One tablespoon gelatin dissolved in one cup cold water; add two cups hot water, one and one-half cups shredded pineapple, one-half cup sugar. Put in cool place. When it begins to set around edge add one cup cream. Whipped cream is nice if you can get it. Let stand till thick. Will serve eight people.

Nut and Raisin Cake—One cup sugar, one-half cup butter, one-half cup milk, two eggs well beaten (whites and yolks separately), one and one-half cups flour, one and one-half teaspoons baking powder, one cup raisins chopped fine, one cup walnuts chopped fine. Flour nuts and raisins and mix in cake last. Frost with white frosting and sprinkle with chopped nuts.

THE TABLE.

Apple and Date Salad—Cut pared apples into thin strips. Cut the dates into similar pieces, using about one-fourth as much as apples. To each pint of material add two tablespoons of olive oil and turn the mixture over again. Let stand closely covered for half an hour. Turn into a bowl lined with lettuce leaves. Serve with bread and butter at luncheon or supper.

Every Day Talks To Every Day People

(BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.)

A young woman, knelt by a cradle with a baby lay, a baby girl with sun-kissed hair. The doctor had been sent him after the divorce—after their foolish, headstrong fly into the court with their puny trouble. Either of them had not half tried that marriage is so much what the individuals make it. From out the pocket of the coat there fell a rambler rose. She stooped for it, its petals changed to ashes at her touch—but from its crushed leaves a fragrance came up to her that cut her like a knife. At the bush of rambler roses he had held her to his heart; he had told her—

That night in an eastern city, a woman's breath came fast. The room called his name. She held out her arms to him; the arms that held her child. Then she faded from sight. He started up—way out in a western city, far from his wife's home. His wife? He looked up, shining stars and groaned.

And he so back?

On the side of an open grave, on a new hill, Alice Farrell Folsom lay. Her eyes of grief seemed closed to overflowing. She faced him. Her little girl had winced back to the God who had made her. She tried to think it was the best. It was hard. She thought of the words of her Lord: "The Lord gives and the Lord takes away." Sorrowfully she turned away her lonely home.

That night in a western city a woman sat and dreamed. There were roses. Behind them shaped a cottage down a winding country lane. In the doorway a woman with a child. A child? She called his name. She held out her arms to him; the arms that now held a little child. Each came fast, he started up, and slowly faded from his sight. He was alone. Alone in a western city—far from his wife and his home. His wife? He turned a staring gaze up to the shining stars.

And he so home?

Mrs. David Lloyd George started to board her furniture. She was to board what needed to be done. The manager of the store had gladly consented to take her. Strange, she thought she would make a success of selling goods to housewives. She had made a success. She winced. One by one she packed her belongings into the

CHANCELLOR'S WIFE MUCH SOUGHT AFTER

Mrs. David Lloyd George.

Next to Queen Mary herself, the charming, motherly wife of David Lloyd George, chancellor of the British exchequer, is probably the most sought after woman in England. This is accounted for in part by the fact that it is believed her husband will be the next premier.

young woman sent a letter. It was short and to the point. It simply read: "I for my part regret the past. For the sake of our baby, whom you never knew, will you come back?" "Alice!" in the envelope she put a rambler rose.

Do you believe in divorce?

Salts and cellulose then are the chief substances which "vegetables" supply, and these are both so necessary that special care should be taken to cook the vegetables well in order to make them attractive and to make people like and want them. Sometimes, too, it is necessary to take care that the mineral matter or salts be retained in the vegetables. This is not necessary when vegetables and fruit are very abundant, but only when the supply is limited. Under the latter circumstances, the vegetable should be steamed in a dish or cooked in very little water and the juice should be poured over the vegetable when it is served. Spinach, which is especially rich in salts, can, when it is young, be cooked with the addition of no more water than that which clings to the leaves after they are washed.

Many common vegetables are overcooked. This is particularly true of the green vegetables like cabbage and spinach which consist of the leaves of plants. They are often cooked like the root vegetables, turnips, parsnips, and carrots, which being starchy and more or less fibrous require long continued cooking. The fact is that cabbage frequently falls into disfavor because it is not cooked well. Many people think they cannot eat it without danger of digestive troubles. This is unfortunate, because it is one of the most convenient of the green vegetables to obtain during the winter months. Farmers' Bulletin 266 on "Preparation of Vegetables for the Table," written by Maria Parloa, says it is not cabbage that causes the trouble, but overcooked cabbage. The bulletin tells how this vegetable should look when rightly cooked and also how it looks when overcooked, and gives a rule for preparing it properly. When done just enough it is crisp and tender, not soft and tough, and the part which was originally green is green still and that which was white is white still. Overcooked cabbage has lost all its crispness and also its characteristic color; it is more or less yellow throughout. It has developed too a strong flavor which is not present in cabbage that is cooked just enough. Of course, the amount of cooking needed depends upon the age of the cabbage, for the cellulose grows tough as this vegetable matures, and the time of boiling cannot be stated closer than as from 25 to 45 minutes. It is necessary, therefore, to depend upon the signs which have been given above.

To Boil Cabbage.

Cut a small head of cabbage into four parts, cutting down through the stock. Soak for half an hour in a pan of cold water to which has been added a tablespoonful of salt; this is to draw out any insects that may be hidden in the leaves. Take from the water and cut into slices. Have a large stewpan half full of boiling water; put in the cabbage, pushing it under the water with a spoon. Add one tablespoonful of salt and cook for 25 to 45 minutes, depending upon the age of the cabbage. Turn into a colander and drain for about two minutes. Put in a chopping bowl and mince. Season with butter, pepper, and more salt if it requires it. Allow a tablespoonful of butter to a generous pint of the cooked vegetable. Cabbage cooked in this manner will be of delicate flavor and may be generally eaten without distress. Have the kitchen windows open at the top while the cabbage is boiling, and there will be little if any odor of cabbage in the house.

Creamed Cabbage.

One pint boiled and minced cabbage, one-half pint hot milk, one tablespoonful butter, one teaspoonful flour, one-half teaspoonful salt, one-half teaspoonful pepper.

Put the cabbage, hot milk, salt, and pepper in a stewpan and on the fire. Beat the butter and flour together until creamy, then stir into the contents of the stewpan. Simmer ten minutes, being careful not to scorch the sauce; serve very hot.

egg may be added, but this is not necessary. Roll out and prick very closely with a fork. Bake in a rather hot oven until well browned. This is a recipe which comes from Ayer's and the bread is cut in small biscuits instead of being baked in a sheet.

Spaghetti.—Break into inch pieces a package of spaghetti and boil in salted water until tender. Drain. While the spaghetti is cooking, cut one onion and one pepper into slices, place in a saucepan with a half pint of tomato puree and cook for 15 minutes, add the spaghetti and another cupful of puree, cover and simmer slowly an hour. Then place in a buttered baking dish with cheese and bake until well heated through. A half cupful of cheese is sufficient.

Banana Sandwiches.—Place thin slices of banana on buttered bread; squeeze a little lemon juice over with a sprinkling of salt. Put slices together and serve at once.

Fruit Snaps.—Soften a cupful of butter, add a cupful and a half of brown sugar, a half cupful of molasses, one cupful each of currants and raisins, a cupful of chopped nuts, three eggs, a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a little cold water, one teaspoonful each of cloves, cinnamon and allspice with flour enough to roll.

Scotch Short Bread.—Take four ounces each of rice flour, wheat flour and butter, as well as the same amount of sugar, cut in the butter as for pastry, then add two tablespoonfuls of cream and if liked a beaten egg may be added, but this is not necessary. Roll out and prick very closely with a fork. Bake in a rather hot oven until well browned. This is a recipe which comes from Ayer's and the bread is cut in small biscuits instead of being baked in a sheet.

Spaghetti.—Break into inch pieces a package of spaghetti and boil in salted water until tender. Drain. While the spaghetti is cooking, cut one onion and one pepper into slices, place in a saucepan with a half pint of tomato puree and cook for 15 minutes, add the spaghetti and another cupful of puree, cover and simmer slowly an hour. ## Peggy &amp; Company

A Distressing Adventure With a Cow

Be it said in Peggy's defense before further relating that which is to follow that she has never wanted any claims to distinction as a naturalist. That is to say, Peggy is quite willing to admit her unfamiliarity with the habits and manners of beasts of any species. So it is not to her discredit nor does it asperse her natural girlish timidity if in her adventure with a cow she should be afflicted beyond measure at the creature's ferocious behavior.

It had been Peggy's determination when first arriving at the Brown's country place to learn to milk. She had seen a musical show once with a rural scene and a chorus of charming milk maids. Ever since Peggy had pined to be a milk maid and do as milk maids do. Her mother, as mentioned before, had been pleased at the thought of her learning a domestic instinct in Peggy.

It would be pleasant to here record the account of Peggy's successful eagerness with the cow. It would please Peggy's mother unspeakably. But she me it cannot be.

Ironing Troubles Disappear at the Fairy-Like Touch of the Electric Iron

If your home is electrically lighted, you can always enjoy an easy, fretless ironing day. You can do the work in far less time, too, than with the old-fashioned, inefficient and iron.

There is no reason why ironing should exhaust you because

An Electric Iron Is Inexpensive To Own and Operate

An Electric Iron means better ironing—the elimination of scorching or sticking. The clean, polished surface of an Electric Iron is always at the right temperature and it stays so—even on heavy wet work. For the summer months especially you will appreciate the cool comfort of an Electric Iron.

FARM MANAGEMENT SUBJECT AT CAMP

ALLEN B. WEST IS TAKING UP
SUMMER WORK NEAR WAUKESHA.

ARE VISITING FARMS

Seven States Represented by Twenty Men—To Fully Investigate
Modern Methods.

As the undersigned is desirous of making his work in agriculture as practical and as valuable as possible to the farmers of Rock county, he is availing himself of the opportunity offered by the summer field course in farm management of the College of Agriculture of the University of Wisconsin, and is enjoying life and work in camp at Bethesda Crossing, in Waukesha county, about five miles from Waukesha.

The party consists of about twenty men, representing seven states, Missouri, Ohio, Illinois, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Tennessee and Kansas. They are housed in tents of 10x12, with a larger tent for a meeting place, and a ward at a nearby farm house.

We go out for work by twos, the partner of the writer being a teacher and a student of the long course in agriculture. The camp is in the midst of some of the farms of the most progressive and successful of Wisconsin farmers, and the men are busy from early morning until dark studying the applications of economic and scientific principles to the business management of the individual farm, taking inventories and farm censuses, mapping out fields and economical rotations, and studying the shape, location, size of fields and buildings for economical organization of farm work, holding frequent conferences with owners and managers. In this way the men of the camp come in close touch with practical farm problems and conditions.

To the undersigned and his partner was assigned the task of mapping a certain farm of the neighborhood and planning for it such a rotation of crops as seems most practicable.

This farm was recently purchased by a progressive young farmer, who finds it badly infected with quack grass and Canada thistles, and mustard, with poor buildings and fences. The different fields were first paced off, noting crops and topography, then a map was drawn and areas computed. Next a balanced rotation of crops was planned, including alfalfa, and submitted to the farmer.

This was followed by the drawing of a new map showing new arrangement of fields, and there was put into writing the plan of the crops to be raised in the fields for the next five years, or until the rotation should be established. Then a hog rotation for a smaller area for hogs was planned. The work was complicated by the fact that the farm is cut by two railroads and a team road.

After the completion of the work on rotation, data on farm accounts is taken in the line of profit and loss.

Milking Contest.
Th evennings in camp are short, as the tents are not lighted, and the men usually work as long as they can see, turning in early and rising early. One evening a milking contest was side states, and although Wisconsin competing against nine men from outside states, an although Wisconsin leads as a dairy state her men were defeated in the contest. The Wisconsin men milked seventy-six pounds in 33 minutes, and the other side milked ninety-two pounds in 32 minutes. Each side had three milkers at a time, and a man was detailed to keep the time and watch the cans.

One evening, the work for the day having been completed, about seven o'clock the men gathered in the large tent and sang, and then engaged in various stunts such as a military drill, broad and high jumps, and various dashes.

A Visit to a Certified Milk Plant.
One of the farms visited was that of R. W. Rowlands, who, on a farm of about 100 acres, keeps about 100 head of stock, furnishing what is known as certified milk to the city. The milk is pumped from the farm to a depot, the milk pitting the farm 80 per quart, bottles and transportation being furnished by the company handling the milk in the city.

One of the requirements of certified milk is that the bacterial count shall not exceed 15,000. The Rowlands farm has been able to keep the count down to 1,800. This is done by milking in covered pails, keeping barns and cows clean, cooling the milk rapidly and sterilizing all utensils used. The barn is lighted by a solid line of windows the entire length of the barn, and the windows are screened. The calves are kept in small boxstalls in the barn during the first year.

His cows are Guernseys, and he has built up his herd by judicious buying and breeding. He once owned Bessie, who at 3 1/2 years of age made a record of 77 lbs. of butter fat in a year, nearly 300 lbs. in excess of what is required for entrance into the Advanced Registry. He bought Bessie as a calf from a butcher, being attracted by her appearance as he saw her in the wagon, paying $10 for her, the butcher congratulating himself that he had made $3 in the deal.

Bessie, being rescued from the butcher's wagon, has since ridden over the state in the "live stock special."

At another time Mr. Rowlands bought a bunch of six heifers for $55. He has refused $800 for one of these cows, and none of the others have been sold for less than $500.

Mr. Rowlands works in connection with his brother-in-law, Mr. J. H. Williams, who also has a certified milk plant and lives on a farm in the vicinity. They have built up their business by judicious buying as well as selling, having started with very little, but a few years since working along on their farms and marketing their milk in the usual way, they decided, like many other farmers, that they were not getting proper returns for their investment of money and labor. Instead of blaming it to high taxes and market conditions and fate generally, they set about devising some way to increase their incomes, with the result that they started the certified milk business by carrying to the city in suit case bottles of their milk, which they sold to a few private customers. This proved so successful that it was not long before they were able to dispose of all they could produce to those who bought by the wholesale.

The bottles furnished by the dealer are capped and sealed by machinery and the seal is not broken until the milk is in the hands of the consumer, who is willing to pay the advanced price for the superior product.

The students took data from the Rowlands farm for their profit and loss balance sheets, and will figure out the profits or loss, as the case may be.

After two weeks spent in Waukesha county the camp will be moved to Rosendale, Fond du Lac county, where similar work will be continued for another two weeks.

ORFORDVILLE

Orfordville, Wis., June 30.—Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Terry of Brodhead spent a short time in the village on Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Fred Pankhurst and children of Hanover spent the day with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Staven on Tuesday.

John Torpy of Footville has commenced with the interior finish at the T. O. Rime house.

Work has been resumed on all road jobs near Orfordville. Work was all suspended during the latter days of last week owing to the great amount of rain.

Maui Cantina has commenced to repair the residence that he recently purchased of the William Turner estate. There has been a dirth of vacant houses in Orfordville and doubtless there will be a renter in waiting by the time the repairs are completed.

Mrs. Onnie Ennis Ambrose has gone to Rochester, Minn., where she will enter the Navy hospital. Mrs. Ambrose is the daughter of J. F. Ennis in the town of Spring Valley.

Appearance Is Not All.
A gentle spirit may express itself in rude words of illiteracy; it is not therefore rude. Ruffianism may speak the language of learning or religion; it is ruffianism still. Strength may wear the garb of weakness, and still be strong; and a weakling may carry the weapons of strength, but fight with a faint heart.—Harold Bell Wright.

HISTORICAL LANDMARK SUITABLY RECORDED NOW

Tablet Placed On Site of Old Fur Trade Post.

Every community proud of its past should take steps to preserve its record for the benefit of posterity. One effective way of accomplishing this is by marking historic sites with monuments or tablets. The national government has engaged extensively in this work, particularly in connection with the battlefields of the civil war, in marking the field of Gettysburg, which is said to have been spent by the national and state governments.

In Wisconsin the work of marking historic sites is supported by the Archaeological Society, the Federation of Women's Clubs, and the Daughters of the American Revolution of the state. On June 20, under the auspices of these organizations, a bronze tablet was unveiled with appropriate ceremonies on the site of the old Iowan-St. Cyr fur-trade post at the northwest corner of Lake Mendota, Dane county.

Dr. Louise P. Kellogg delivered the historical address on the occasion, emphasizing the facts that the tablet, in addition to marking the site of the earliest white habitation in the vicinity of the four lakes, marked also the scene of General Dodge's important council with the Winnebago Indians during the Black Hawk war of 1832, and the city of the Four Lakes, destined by its founders to be the capital of the future state of Wisconsin.

An interesting incident was the recollection, by one of the audience, that her father, a citizen of Pennsylvania, had purchased as a speculation several two lots in the building capital during the land craze era of the thirties.

INTERESTING FACTS CONCERNING INSECTS

Grasshoppers, Crickets, Ants and Even Cockroaches Are Subjects of Fascinating Study.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Washington, D. C., July 1.—The Rip Van Winkle, the Jacks and Hydes, the aristocrats, the philosophers and the "Hoboes" of the insect world are described in a communication to the National Geographic Society, by Washington, D. C., by David Fairchild, the plant explorer who has scoured the world for plants of economic value and introduced them into the United States.

In describing the peculiar habits and surprising achievements of insects, he says, the champion astronaut is the king grasshopper, which has the ability to jump 100 times its length. It can also jump 100 miles before the wind. Traded grasshoppers some of these go in such numbers that they make a cloud 1,000 square miles in extent. "Its great front lip hides a pair of jaws as effective as a hay-chopper, and it has an appetite as voracious as that of a hippopotamus," writes Mr. Fairchild. "A young chick finds itself shut inside the egg-shell and must work its way out alone, but the young grasshoppers and them hardened case in the ground made by their mother, and it takes a half dozen of them working together to dislodge the egg which she them in.

The carrying power of the song of the cricket is extraordinary; there are species whose strident notes can be heard for a mile, although their little bodies are scarcely more than an inch long. The males alone are musical, as it is reasonable to suppose, since the females have ears in their fore legs, that they are singing to their mates and not making a noise to attract the attention of the males. It is hard to appreciate what fighters they are among themselves, the larger ones even turning cannibals when food is scarce.

The creatures of our houses, the cockroach is the most detested. Housewives may be surprised to learn that a cockroach can live five years, and that it takes a year to develop to maturity. It is also a very hardy creature, and it can live in a capsule like a spectacle case, which she carries about with her until she is ready to deposit it in some suitable place. Later she returns to help her baby cockroaches out of their capsule.

"The song of the cicada is the noisiest in the insect world. The 17-year cicada has been called the Rip Van Winkle of the insect world. From its winged of three issues a creature with sort white body and mole-like front legs. It hurries to the ground and disappears beneath its surface some 10 to 20 feet. For 17 years it digs its way around in absolute darkness, and then comes to the surface to join in a marriage revelry of a few brief weeks. It is a strange creature of the earth, though encased in grave-clothes of parchment; but it soon spits these up to the back, pulls itself out, dries its powerful wings, and flies away with the portance of an angel to live out a two or three weeks.

The social organization of the ants has been the admiration of human beings from the earliest times, because of its interest in the social life of the colony. There is an organization of remaners. The workers are remaners, the soldiers are remaners, the nurses are remaners, and there is one queen ant all, who lays all the eggs of the colony. The males or young colony are but mates for the young queens. Together with them they leave the nest on their marriage day and together make their marriage flight, but as soon as this is over they die and the colony gets on easily without them.

The Dr. Jaekel and Mr. Hyde is so complete between the butterfly and the velvet green worm that it is no wonder that for centuries no connection between the two careers of these creatures was suspected. In general it is true that no insect or larva is injurious to plants except in its larval stage, and herein has laid the clever deception which has uncovered the protected these gay mating creatures of the air from the systematic attacks of man until quite recent times.

The spider world has a vagabond which builds no nest or web, being content to travel the butterfly in the construction only of a sac in which to lay her eggs. It does not grow to be more than half an inch in length, but it is among the most active of all spiders, and in the United States alone there are nearly a score of species of these little soldiers of fortune living nowhere and roaming the damp fields in search of prey."

Has it ever occurred to you that, from the point of view of eyesight, there is a right way and a wrong way of holding a book? If you hold it the wrong way, especially if the pages be of smooth, shining paper, you will get a reflection harmful to the eyes. An eye specialist has been pointing this out, and he says the thing could be remedied by using a certain kind of bookmarker which would destroy the reflection, and in that case you could hold the book anyhow you liked without coming to harm.

Here is Janesville proof of their merit:

Mrs. M. Smith, 921 Center St., Janesville, Wis., says: "I suffered severely at times from rheumatic pains and backache. My sides hurt me and sometimes my kidneys were sore. I noticed that my kidneys were acting too freely. One of my neighbors told me to try Doan's Kidney Pills and I got a box at the People's Drug Co. As soon as I began using them I felt better and my kidneys were in much better shape. I recommend Doan's Kidney Pills just as highly now as I did three years ago when I did how much they did for me. I use Doan's Kidney Pills once in a while and they live up to all the claims made for them."

The Lapse of Enoch Wentworth

By ISABEL GORDON CURTIS

Author of "The Woman from Weinstadt"

Illustrations by Ellsworth Young

Copyright, 1914, by F. C. Brown & Co.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Irony of Fate.

Wentworth looked himself in the library one Saturday morning. Oswald, with quiet insistence, had continued the demand that he break away, go home, and begin work on another play. "Business can be carried along without you," was his daily assurance. "The House of Esterbrook" is good for another season, perhaps for more than one, and we ought to look ahead. I am asked every day if you are writing another play. You ought to strike while the iron is hot. The luck we are having should be an inspiration to you."

The Waverly Place house was perfectly still. Enoch seated himself before the desk, cleared off the blotter, laid out a heap of copy paper, filled the ink-well, and adjusted a new pen. He leaned his head upon his hand for a few minutes, and his listless eyes fell upon a calendar. He discovered that it bore the dates of March instead of April. He tore off the record of weeks which had passed and dropped it into the waste basket. The pen rested listlessly between his fingers. When he tried to write with it the ink had dried. He did not dip it in the bottle again. A trail of sleepless days and nights lay behind him—he felt as if his brain had drowsed at its post.

He picked up a rubber band, twisted it about his fingers, then pulled it thin till it suddenly snapped in two. He shook himself as if a strenuous effort to wake up. For days he had been evolving what seemed like a viable plot for a play. He tramped the streets to do his thinking and planned the scenario from beginning to end. The night before he had locked himself in his office at the Gotham and in a frenzy of haste shaped out each scene on his typewriter.

The manuscript lay at his elbow. He read it through. Suddenly he realized that the stuff fell short, of what he could not decide. It lacked reality. He compared it with Merry's drama. The story in that rose up out of the paper, each character a living, breathing man or woman. This story was dead, absolutely dead. He lifted the sheets and deliberately tore them across, gritting his teeth while the paper zipped, as a man does when he is in pain.

He picked up a letter which lay beside him on the desk. It was addressed in Merry's irregular writing. There was nothing inside the envelope but a check for an amount in five figures. Wentworth glanced at it, then tore it across. He had sent the check to the actor without a word; it represented the entire royalties on "The House of Esterbrook." The mail brought it back to him as it had gone. A small clock ticked out the time on top of the desk. He remembered it was a Christmas gift from Merry. The ceaseless round of its second-hand fascinated him.

"It would be great if one could work as that ridiculous needle does," he thought. "It is such a lifelike thing. It goes on with a regularity that feazes a man, never pausing day or night, never dropping out or balking as we humans do when the brain goes numb. I wonder," Enoch loafed back in his chair. "I wonder if it is too late to come back. It does not seem possible that a man could undergo a physical change in a few months while he sits still and hearty. They say such a thing does come, though—quick as a flash, when your arteries harden, or, something of that sort happens. I'm something of that sort myself. I'm forty-two. A man isn't old at forty-two, and yet—I feel old today. I suppose," he stared steadily at the face of the little clock as if it were a human countenance. "I suppose this is part of the scheme they call retribution."

He uttered the last word in an undertone as if some one were within hearing. There had been moments—especially in the dead of night—when he had longed to lay bare his soul to a father confessor. The conscience which had slept for months awoke and was raging at him like a demon. He sat silent, going over his life step by step from the day when he was confronted by temptation and fell.

The Girl's Eyes Grew Round With Terror.

Dorcas had branded him as a thief. Still she had kept her word and never again questioned the authorship of the play. Her accusation left a welt in his soul like a stroke from the thin end of a whip. It was a welt which had not healed. He knew she had spoken the truth. He dropped his head upon his arms. It was years since he had said a prayer. He had forgotten the form that prayer takes.

"God," he murmured, "if there is any way for me to come back—and begin again—show me that way." He did not raise his head; in an apathy he was listening curiously to a commotion in the lower part of the house. From a wrangle of voices in the hall rose the clear tones of a woman. He jumped to his feet with consternation in his eyes and flung the door open. While he stood motionless listening his forehead wrinkled in perplexity. A cabman was carrying a trunk upstairs. It was so large that it blocked the stairway. A few steps below Jason tried in vain to pass.

"Yo ain't got no right to tote dat trunk up dar without Marse Wentworth's say so," cried the old negro. "I'm gwine tell him 'bout hit." When a woman's voice from the lower hall answered, Enoch's face went pallid white.

"You dippy old black fool, I know my business. Cabby, take up that trunk as I tell you to." Wentworth could hear Jason expostulate again. "Marse Enoch don't know you're comin'. Missy Dorcas am out en she ain't giv me no orders 'bout company."

"Missy Dorcas!" repeated the woman with a contemptuous laugh. "Get this out of your noodle straight away: I'm not company Miss Dorcas is expecting. And here's a bit of advice, lose your doddery old jaw, then announce me to your master."

Enoch, with a few quick steps, reached the top of the stair and leaned over the balusters. The cabman glanced at his stern face, then dropped the trunk from his shoulder and steadied it on the edge of a step. "Stay right where you are," ordered Wentworth abruptly.

wait until I can you."

The man obeyed. The actress paused on the top step and looked down at Jason. "As for you," she looked at him with a steaming smile, "mind your own business now. I have announced myself to your master."

Wentworth stood with his hand upon the railing of the stair. His face was stern and there were hard lines about his mouth. He held the door of the library open.

"Come in here," he said. There was no cordiality in his welcome. The actress brushed past him with a short, unpleasant laugh. Her manner was full of self-confidence. Wentworth realized that he had never seen her look more beautiful; still his pulses did not quicken by a beat. She wore a gown of strangely lurid blue which few women would have dared to affect. The harmony between the dead gold of her hair and a willow blue plume that swept down from her hat was almost startling. Her attitude was aggressive and a certain sense of power lay behind her theatrical entrance. Enoch's face settled into a frown, although his eyes were full of scowling perplexity. He rapped the door shut and turned the key in the lock.

"Now," he demanded sharply, "be good enough to tell me what this means." "Aren't you going to ask me to sit down?" The woman spoke with an enticing smile. "No, I have no intention of asking you to stay so long." Zilla Paget laughed and sank languidly into a chair beside the fireplace. "I would suggest that you sit down," she said suavely.

Enoch shook his head. "You may get tired before I am through talking. It will take some time to discuss this affair." "What affair?" Wentworth turned on her with quiet scorn. "Don't be foolish enough to try blackmail. Anything like," he paused for a moment as if trying to find a suitable word. "like sentiment for instance—or call it what you wish—died a natural death one afternoon when I tried to explain things to you. The minute a woman lets herself go and shows the devil in her makeup at white heat, sentiment can die—die a very sudden death. Besides, I have nothing on my conscience. I treated you as generously as any man would have done

Weak Women!

Some women are weak because of ills that are common in Girlhood—Womanhood and Motherhood

The prescription which Dr. R. V. Pierce uses most successfully—in diseases of women—which has stood the test of nearly half a century—is

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Take this in liquid or tablet form as a tonic and regulator!

Mrs. Kate D. Richardson, of Beasley, Essex Co., Va., says: "I esteem it a pleasure to testify to the wonderful curative qualities of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. For some years I suffered greatly with weakness peculiar to my sex. I was treated by several physicians but gradually grew worse. One of my friends told me of the good results of your 'Favorite Prescription.' I went to the drug store and got a bottle, and after taking it with the 'Pleasant Pellets,' I commenced to get better. I never knew what happiness was, for I was always sick and complaining and made others as well as myself unhappy. So you see what a debt I owe you!"

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate stomach, liver, bowels

Stops Neuralgia—Kills Pain

Sloan's Liniment gives instant relief from Neuralgia or Sciatica. It goes straight to the painful part—Soothers the Nerves and Stops the Pain. It is also good for Rheumatism, Sore Throat, Chest Pains and Sprains. You don't need to rub—it penetrates. Mr. J. R. Swinger, Louisville, Ky., writes: "I suffered with quite a severe Neuralgic Headache for four months without any relief. I used Sloan's Liniment for two or three nights and I haven't suffered with my head since." Get a bottle today. under the circumstances."

Miss Paget threw back her head and laughed. "Sit down," she advised. "This is a different affair entirely. Do not flatter yourself; there is not a ghost of sentiment in this."

Enoch walked to the mantel, leaned his elbow upon it, and stared down at her. "I'll give you exactly ten minutes to explain what you want. If it is about your child, I am quite as anxious to get him out of my house as you are."

"My child! I will relieve your mind on that point immediately. It is not my child I want. If your sister wants to play foster-mother, she is quite welcome to him. When I think of it," she began slowly to draw off her gloves, "Miss Wentworth has really done me a great favor."

"Oblige me then," Enoch's voice was full of cold indifference, "by getting down to business as quickly as possible. You must be gone before my sister comes in."

"Indeed," the actress looked up into his face with an insolent smile. "Why should we hurry? I want to ask you a few questions. I understand you are writing a new play." She turned to glance at the litter of manuscript on his desk. "Is there a part in it for me?"

"I have not begun to place parts yet."

"Ah!" She watched him with calm scrutiny. "How is it coming along? Will it be as big as 'The House' has been?"

"Is it any of your business?"

"Probably not; still, I am interested. I have been wondering," she spoke slowly, as if thinking aloud, "if it can possibly come up to the expectations of the public. A second play is often such a—rotter."

"What in thunder are you driving at?" asked Enoch fiercely.

Dinner Stories

Slowly Betsy and Dennis walked through O'Flannigan's turnip field, and silently seated themselves, side by side, upon the fence surrounding the pigsty.

"The shadows deepened. Nothing broke the stillness save an occasional grunt from the interior of the sty. 'Say something,' said Betsy, a hint of impatience in her voice. 'Ow beautiful ye be, Betsy!'"

Betsy merely edged a little closer. "Just think," went on Dennis, thus encouraged. "When 've enough to buy a pig, we'll have a home all of our own; an' it won't be much longer."

"Oh, Deunny," she answered, a trifle resentfully, "what do I care for pigs? I shan't want a pig when I've got you!"

And the inmate of the sty gave a double grunt.

"But it comes to the same thing in the end," said Senator Reed, apropos of a quibbling amendment to a bill. "It is like the case of Jinks."

"Jinks," a man said, grinning, "has changed so since he lost his money that half his friends don't know him."

"And the other half?"

"Oh, the other half don't know he's lost his money."

Want Ads Work Fast

A want ad reading: For Sale—Five puppies, pure scotch collie bred, at 57 Green St. sold the little fellows before eight o'clock of the same evening.

That's all! Unless, we might ask, if you have a boy or girl who ever sidles up to you and in that voice you know so well, says: Daddy, buy me a puppy. One for my very own. I'll be so good to him. Daddy—please?"

If you have, (and you've got our sympathy if you haven't) just try and satisfy his or her wants through the columns of your home town paper. Yes! the want ad page. You have no idea until you start reading it, the amount of human interest in that one sheet. Ever read it? Ever use it?
